Interview with Bob Robertson, son of Edmonton's first sheriff about his father's appointment, 1967.

Interviewer: And what did you father do when he first settled here?

Robertson: Well, I don't...he was in the store business, a kind of a store business, but in '85, he was appointed deputy sheriff.

Interviewer: Yes.

Robertson: Well then, he kept that...you see, Alberta was all one then. But then after 1905, he was appointed sheriff, that's when we became a province, and they divided the district, you see.

Interviewer: Yes.

Robertson: And then he was sheriff until he died.

Interviewer: Yes, I remember that.
